

Comino Survival Camp

We were all eagerly waiting for a new experience since it was something that was never done before.

It all started on Monday morning. We all met at our H.Q. with our haversacks packed and ready to face this challenge. Our plan was to search and look for food! Every single person, despite their age had the same amount of food packed in an army pack. It was time, and we lead our way to Cirkewwa to catch the Comino ferry. Our trip was a hard one due to rough seas. The Unit arrived at Comino and the adventure started. Due to rough seas the ferry deployed us at a point and had to walk to Santa Marija Campsite where there we camped.

Then, the Unit was divided into groups where each group had to attempt different tasks such as track and look for food, searching for wood and the structure of the campsite. The day was coming to an end, and the groups were gathered up together for the night.

With sunrise, one of the groups, which were assigned to look for food, was already gone while the others were preparing breakfast. After breakfast, the unit prepared various fishing recourses. Sunset was taking place, 3 groups from the Unit combined together and set off to search for food. It took so long to see the first indication of a torch light of one of the group. When they were all back, we planned dinner. It was quite a night to remember! The rest of the night was dedicated to evaluate the camp.

Wednesday, last day at Comino. We had breakfast and started pitching down tents and cleaning the area. At 11am we led our way to catch the Comino ferry back to Malta. It was such a marvelous experience and we went back home with our mind full of memories that will last forever and being proud to form part of this group!
